

Look around. There's a growing demand for physicians – and it's increasing in urgency. Not just in our communities but within our military. Not just throughout our country but around the globe. Question is: Who out there will come forward to answer the call? Step into the world of Navy Health Care – consider the opportunities in Navy Medicine. Be among those who, when faced with "You can only do so much," are at their best.

DELIVER HOPE TO A WORLD IN NEED

NAVY

Everyday medicine...and something far beyond.

Under your care, there's a child injured by a storm that struck without warning. In your waiting room, underprivileged families desperate for a free vaccine. In the course of your rounds, heartfelt thanks from people who haven't seen a doctor in years.

This is not your typical emergency room, your average office or your local clinic. It is a brief glimpse into Navy Medicine – and the truth is, it can be so much more.

Serving patients. Country. And humanity.

Serving part-time in the Navy Reserve, you can expand upon your role as a provider. Become a global ambassador of health. Maintain your own life and your own practice. While enriching both with the rewarding work you do for others.

Impacting lives around the world.

Hurricanes. Tsunamis. Earthquakes. During your two-week annual training, you could be the one to assist those devastated by the elements – bringing much-needed aid and goodwill.

Going beyond the scope of traditional care, Navy Physicians treat thousands of civilians globally each year. Forging partnerships with foreign governments, International Relief Teams, and organizations such as FEMA, USAID and Project HOPE. Delivering medical and civic assistance – and hope – to people in need.

More routinely, Navy Physicians have the primary responsibility to look after the medical needs of the brave men and women who serve our country. Their families. And other beneficiaries who've served. In this capacity, you'll fill in for deployed Active Duty Navy Physicians. Working mainly at locations that are typically close to your home.

Distinguishing yourself as a caregiver.

In the Navy Reserve, each physician is a respected Officer on a renowned team of specialists – anchoring one of the largest health-care systems on earth. Here, you'll work with the latest tools and technologies. At cutting-edge facilities stateside and abroad. Merging the best aspects of civilian and military medicine to gain expertise and versatility that are unmatched.

Performing groundbreaking work.

Opportunities exist in any of 30 specialty and subspecialty areas. From preventative care to emergency treatment to research, you'll find Navy Medicine at the forefront. Pioneering advances in trauma treatment. Using virtual teleconferencing. Achieving milestones in everything from organ transplants to retinal implants, cryotherapy applications to next-generation vaccines.

Contributing to a greater good.

Traditional Reservist service requires a minimum commitment of one weekend a month and two weeks every year. With flexible training options, however, you can comfortably balance your civilian and military schedules. In some cases, even work in the same civilian hospital or setting you work in now.

And anyone interested in a full-time career as a Navy Physician will find the same type of rewarding work. They'll just have the chance to do more of it, travel more often and earn additional benefits that go with a full-time commitment.

The need is great. The chance to make a difference, yours. Think it over. To learn more about serving full-time or part-time, visit navy.com. And if you're ready to find new fulfillment in medicine, contact your local Navy Representative or call 1-800-USA-NAVY.

ELITE PRACTITIONER. MEDICAL AMBASSADOR. NATIONAL HERO.

The distinguished title of M.D. won't be the greatest honor to follow your name. If you're a practicing physician or just starting out, know that there are exciting, challenging and rewarding opportunities waiting for you as a Medical Officer. Serving full-time or part-time. Making a difference in the world. Earning an impressive benefits package that includes available sign-on bonuses, loan repayment assistance, a competitive salary, specialty pay, educational incentives, travel and much more.